

On the cover

The world's democracies are right to seek change in Latin America's worst-governed country. But their responsibilities go further: leader, page 9. A failed revolution may itself be overthrown, page 17. How Venezuela's economy can recover from the Maduro regime, page 20. Hyperinflations can end quickly: Free exchange, page 65

• Talking to the Taliban A deal to end the Afghan insurgency would be wonderful—as long as it is not a figleaf to cover an American retreat: leader, page 10. Edging towards a peace deal, page 31

• The future of fertility Thanks to education, global fertility could fall faster than the UN expects, page 50
